The Soviet Union Begins to Unravel

It is almost hard to believe that just 70 years after the Bolshevik Revolution, the internal contradictions of communism are coming to the fore in the Soviet Union and are ripping it apart. Hard to believe until one remembers that our own Civil War started just about 70 years after the signing of the Constitution.

In Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet Empire has its most intelligent and able leader since Lenin, but there is little he can do against the forces of history. He is caught on the horns of the dilemma that Marxism has created for the leaders of the USSR. Marxism is founded on the notion that man's needs are material and so the ties of class are stronger than the ties of blood, and that once all are elevated or reduced to the same class by governmental action all conflict (class, racial, and ethnic) will disappear from the society. Marx's teacher Hegel would have readily recognized the absurdity of this idea as would any genuine student of history, but communists have until recently always expressed faith in it. That it totally ignores the pyschological realm in the needs of man for the material seems not to have bothered the "great minds" of Marxism, even though they became quite adept at manipulating those psychological needs for the purpose of revolution. They did not allow their practical experience in the real world to undermine their Faith. But the failure of the communist motherland, the Soviet Union, to even approach a Marxist "workers paradise" has been a thorn in the side of those attempting to sell communism around the world, and it's imminent unraveling may spell the doom of the worldwide Marxist revolution because a political movement, unlike a religious faith, must test itself against the facts.

Non-Russians founded Communism and terrorized the Russian people.

FEAR OR BRIBERY

A government that ignores the basic psychological needs of man can only rule on the basis of fear or purchase. Capitalist governments tend to emphasize the latter over the former, and communist governments tend to rely on the former over the latter, though a slow but steady rise in the standard of living since World War II has allowed them to buy off a lot of internal resistance. Nevertheless, neither people who live in fear nor people who are bought identify with the regime, and they manifest their dissatisfaction first through passive resistance. The object becomes to to get more money while doing less and less work. The worker ceases to work hard and no one knows why, so the rulers blame the laziness of their people rather than their system. Thus, it long ago became an article of faith in capitalist Britain that the ordinary employee is lazy, and now the same thing is heard of the American worker and the Russian worker. Strangely, workers in nationalist societies seem not be lazy, but the materialists just cannot figure it out.

Soviet Union

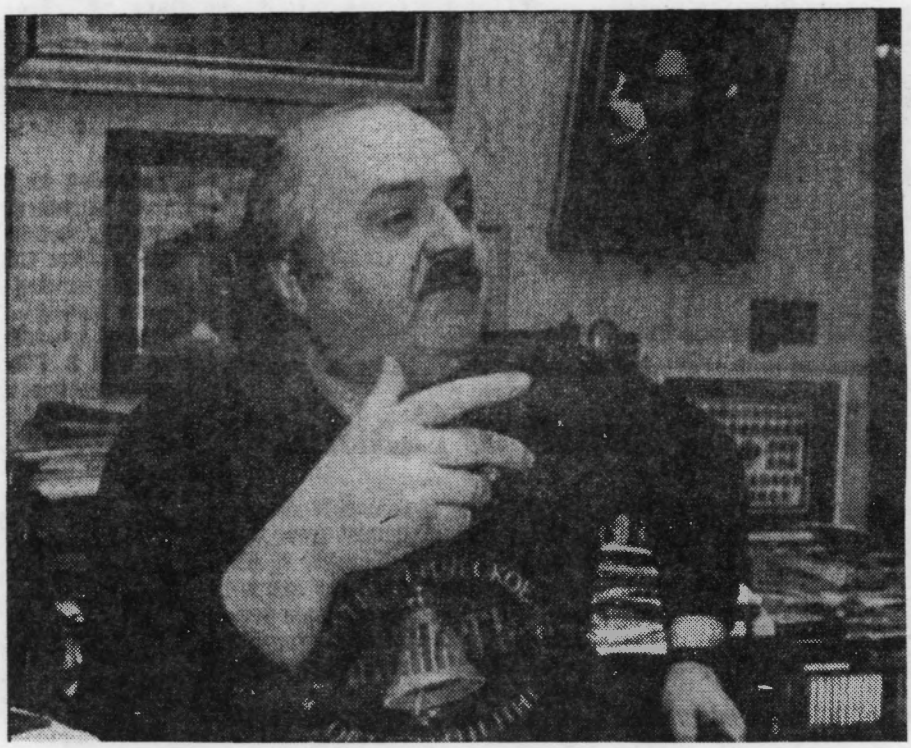
BLOOD IS THICKER THAN MONEY

Gorbachev recognizes that to gain economic efficiency, and hence greater miltary and political power for the country, he must acquire a broader base of mass support, and he must make things more open as talent rises only in a fluid system. In order to accomplish these things he has to notch down the terror. The problem with ruling by fear is that a man with a gun to his head will do anything you tell him to do, but no more. He will not use his own initiative and judgement to improve things, in fact, he delights in following stupid orders to the letter so that projects will fail. The problem with decreasing the terror level is that all the nasty little "problems", such as racism and nationalism, that communism was supposed to have resolved years ago come rushing to the surface. They never went away of course - they were merely suppressed. The Soviet cauldron boils with racial and ethnic conflict because, in fact, the ties of blood are much stronger than the temporary ties of class and are never forgotton, even in a society where almost all (except for the Communist Party elite) have been reduced to essentially the same level of wealth or poverty, as the case may be.



Dmitri Vasiliev, founder of Pamyat, being interviewed by the Post.

The Jews, the Ukrainians, the Estonians, the Latvians, the Lithuanians, the Armenians, the Azerbaijanis, and the Tartars, just to mention a few, all want out of the Empire. All but the Jews really want their own nations - not autonomy, but independence. The Jews claim to want to emigrate to Israel, but most of them end up in the U.S. where life is richer and less dangerous. Even the Russians want a national state. The largest authorized "cultural" organization in the Soviet Union is Pamyat led by Dmitri Vasiliev. Pamyat has 30,000 registered members, and according to Vasiliev, it has millions of unregistered supporters. Like Americans, Russians fear having their names on the lists of anti-System organizations, so its official registration of 30,000 courageous souls is amazing in itself. Pamyat is attacked by Pravda and the Washington Post with equal vigor and for the same reasons as both newpspapers express essentially the same world-view. They object to Pamyat's preaching of Russian nationalism and anti-Semitism, which is just part of the same philosophy as all nationalists are anti-Semitic in one form or another. Nationalists require that the Jews either assimilate or get out, and so the Jews oppose all nationalisms, except for Zionism, of course. The Post interviewed Vasiliev and condemned him in so many words as a Nazi: "At one point in the conversation, Vasiliev launched a broadside against Soviet Jews that was strongly reminiscient of diatribes common in Hitler's Germany."

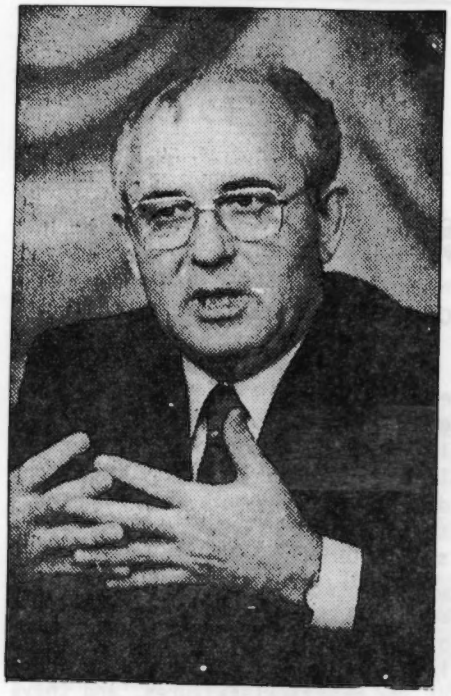
TIGHTENING THE SCREWS

Some think that the Communist Party can tighten things up again at any time, but this is true only to certain extent. The reason that the Communists were once capable of such extraordinary terror was because the leaders were not Russian. Lenin was mixed-breed married to a Jew. All of his top associates, with the exception of Stalin, who was also not Russian, were Jews. These men had no love of Russians, and little love for people of any kind, and so they were capable of the cruelest and greatest crimes in history. Torture and mass murder became the hallmark of all the communist regimes of Eastern Europe because they were all initially dominated by Jews who had no regard for the people they ruled. The cruelty of these Jewish regimes caused uprisings in most of the Soviet satellites, and eventually the Jews were replaced with ethnics after the death of Stalin.

Sheer demographics and Stalin's war against the Old Bolshevik corps caused the structure of the Soviet Communist Party to become Russian over time. Three quarters of the delegates of the Bolshevik party congress in 1918 were Jews, but Stalin managed to eliminate most of these people in his purges of the 1930's because he saw them as a threat to his absolute power. Yet, most of Stalin' eliminators, the commissars and executioners who carried out his homocidal will, were also Jews. Which puts the lie to the vaunted unity of the Jewish people; the Jews are united only in good times - when the pressure is on, they are quite willing to slit each others throats in order to survive and prosper (and we will see this soon in America as the Jews try to back away from Israel.) It was not until after Stalin died that the Jews really began to lose out to the Russians in the struggle for control of the Communist Party. The Jews are still over represented in the ranks of the Party, but they have nothing like the influence they once had, and they are now unable to protect the interests of their own people, hence the desire for mass emigration.

The point is that Russians will not terrorize Russians to the same extent that Jews would and did. The present Soviet leadership is mostly Russian, and it does not want to torture and murder Russians, especially not for some theory that they no longer believe in. Moreover, these Russian leaders have a sense of racial consciousness that they seem less able to suppress than their capitalist counterparts. Leonid Brezhnev, for example, told



Mikhail Grobachev
Entangled in Marxist contradictions

Margaret Thatcher that whether the White Race would continue to dominate the world was the most important question that they could discuss. And Gorbachev has suggested that America solve its racial problems by giving the Blacks their own separate nation; could he be thinking of the same solution for the Soviet Union's racial problems? Perhaps, but he is a reformer and not a revolutionary, and he would never dare try it; and even if he did, the vested interests in the bureaucracy would scream bloody murder and engineer his ouster. The same would have happened to President Nixon (who admitted in private that he believed Blacks to be biologically inferior to Whites) had he tried to rationally separate the races. Nevertheless, Brezhnev's and Gorbachev's racial comments do indicate that racial thinking is now taking place at the top levels of the Communist Party. Can you imagine Lenin or Stalin making such comments? Love for their own kind is certainly in the hearts of the Russian leaders, if not yet in their policies. Such being the case, it seems unlikely that they will return to a policy of extreme terror. Moreover, a renewed Reign of Terror would destroy all hope of

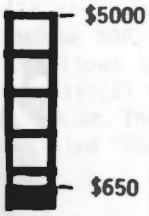
Technology Fund Appeal



The National Democratic Front is expanding rapidly and desperately needs more computer equipment and software for both administrative purposes and desktop publishing. Our goal is to raise $5000 and this appeal will continue to run until we receive the necessary contributions. This is an opportunity for those of you who cannot be active to sacrifice for the Movement. We know you will not let us down.

Please give as much as you can each month.

creating an imaginative, efficient and productive economy.

CONTRADICTIONS

The problem for the Soviet leaders is that if they do not rely on great fear to rule, then they will lose control altogether. The satellite states of Eastern Europe are demanding ever more independence, the nationalities are demanding self-determination, and everyone wants greater freedom to criticize and express themselves. The leaders of the Communist Party have lost faith in their ideology in the face of its practical failures, and they have even accepted their first defeat in war (Afghanistan) because they have lost confidence in themselves and in their mission to spread Communism worldwide. They know now that material success is not enough, and that they are not satisfying the psychological needs of their people, and they are at a loss as to what to do. How long can the Communist Party hold the lid on the pot?

The Russian leaders of the Soviet Union want Russian culture to survive, and they want the White Race to continue to dominate both in their country and in the world, but they are tied to an ideology that preaches multiracialism and universalism. They are unwilling to renounce Marxism because this Faith is the foundation of the political legitimacy of the regime, and they are unwilling to break up the Soviet Empire into its constituent racial and ethnic parts because the size and resources of the country are the foundation of the state's physical strength. Faced with these dilemmas the Communist leadership will try reform after reform in the years to come, but they will all fail because the problems are fundamental in nature and require revolutionary solutions. Though the resources of the Empire are great, the contradictions will sooner or later destroy the Soviet Union, and the world Communist movement will go down with it. GG

Zuendel Convicted Once Again

On May 11th, Ernst Zuendel was convicted by a Toronto jury in his retrial for "publishing false news detrimental to a public interest." The eleven jurors are prevented by Canadian law from discussing the case so we will likely never know why they found Zuendel guilty. The twelfth juror was dismissed because she discussed the case with a Jewess lawyer and expressed respect for Doug Christie. The Jewess lawyer turned her in and she was dismissed. The Jewess was not charged with tampering with the jury. It is not yet known if other jurors were approached by Jews about the case.

Zuendel's courtroom supporters were stunned by the verdict because of the quality and quantity of the evidence put on by the defense team denying the Holocaust. In fact, the prosecution seemed to capitulate in regard to fighting the defense's historical evidence and instead relied on the tactic of painting all of the Zuendel witnesses as Nazis and therefore liars or worse, and astonishingly this approach worked. Why?

There could be several reasons for the verdict. We must remember what Zuendel was asking of the jury. To accept that the Holocaust was an historical lie one must come to believe that everything read on the subject, everything seen on the screen, and everything heard in school is false - that all of our leaders who are in a position to know the truth are liars, that all in authority have engaged in or at least acquiesced to the most monstrous lying in history. To make such a conversion in only four months is perhaps just too much to ask of an ordinary juror. After all, it took most us years to travel the same road.

THE BIG LIE TECHNIQUE

As Hitler explained in Mein Kampf, the Big Lie technique of the Jews works in White countries because our people cannot conceive in engaging in such a practice and so believe that the Jews would not either. Arabs, being so much like Jews, are not so gullible and assume as a matter of course that the Jews are lying about the Holocaust. It is one of the great ironies of history that the German National Socialists who took such pains to be accurate with their facts have been tarred by the very technique that they exposed and condemned.

Such is the meaning of Jewish power - for them words are just weapons, ethics are situational and truth is relative. The nature and conduct of the enemy makes our mission crystal clear. Nor will their corrupt White lackeys fare any better.

OTHER FACTORS

Other possible factors in the decision of the jury are: 1) the enormous social and media pressure for conviction, 2) the understandable desire of a person to resist believing that he has been tricked, 3) Zuendel's commitment to National Socialism and Adolph Hitler, 4) Zuendel's record of playing fast and loose with the facts, and 5) the judge's bias and manipulation on behalf of the prosecution. In regard to #4, Zuendel published and still sells a book which claims that UFOs are Nazi vehicles launched from secret bases in Anarctica which were established by German scientists after the war. The purpose of the book was to get Zuendel on radio and TV so that he could discuss National Socialism in favorable terms. Even though the absurdity of the book is obvious to all, it demonstrates a willingness to play with the truth for political purpose. In regard to #1, can you imagine a juror, after acquiting Zuendel, explaining to his friends and family that the Holocaust is a Big Lie - easier just to send Ernst to jail for awhile.

APPEAL

On May 13th, Zuendel was sentenced to nine months in jail. The decision was hailed by the Canadian press which naturally chose not mention the free speech aspect of the case - pointless really. Those in the know already understand that free speech is dead in the "free world" - best not to let the masses find out any sooner than need be. Anyway, racists have no rights. We understand - we feel the same way about multiracialists. Now it is just a question of who will prevail - ask no quarter and give none.

Dear Sir:

The U.S. Census Bureau recently made an amazing announcement - something we White Nationalists have known for years. Almost 20 years after the advent of the War on Poverty there are 35.3 million Americans living in poverty. The current poverty rate is 15.2% higher today than it was in 1965 when LBJ's so-called "Great Society" programs were just getting started.

A recent study by the National Center for Policy Analysis showed that during the last decade there has been a steady trend toward greater poverty for all races, but

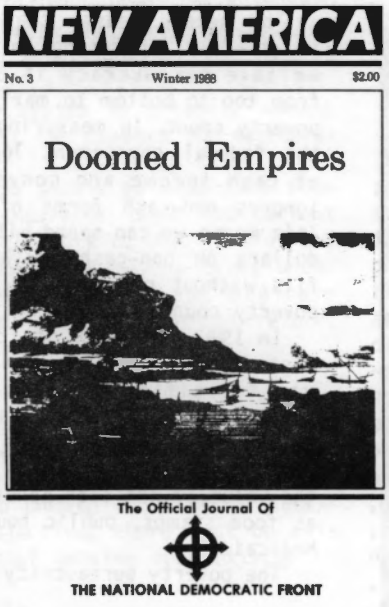
NEW AMERICA – The Radical Voice of American Nationalism



New America is the ideological and historical journal of the National Democratic Front. It exposes the half-truths, historical lies and hypocrisies upon which the present plutocratic System is based, and it reveals and explains the eternal principles of nationalism that guide the NDF. Our wisdom is drawn from an historical analysis that follows truth wherever it may lead. History is the foundation of political wisdom and is the training ground of the true political leader. That is why we lead New America No.3 with the editorial entitled "Masters of History" and follow with these articles:

- On Nationalism Part III: Dynamic Order - Outlines the form of government America will have when the NDF comes to power.
- A Tale of Doomed Empires - Draws lessons from the Spanish conquest of Mexico and Peru.

SHORT BURSTS

Textbooks Attacked

A new report issued by the Council for Basic Education and written by Harriet Tyson-Bernstein entitled A Conspiracy of Good Intentions: America's Textbook Fiasco echoes the charge that we made in the Aug86 Nationalist that education is now being structured around standardized tests in order to improve test scores with consequent damage to real learning. The report says that state and local officials, seeking to raise test scores, have forced publishers to misshape textbooks by cramming in facts without substance or context. The books are "themeless, confusing or deadly dull." The report advocates one nationwide curriculum, as does the NDF, because the "dozens of powerful ministries of education" in this country "issuing undisciplined lists of particulars that must be included in the textbooks" compels the publishers to compress a "melange" of material into "incomprehensibility". The publishers have little choice as they wish to sell as many of each edition as possible and so must appease each major board of education in the same text. The NDF believes that textbooks are only necessary in elementary school and that beyond the sixth grade students should be reading the classics in each particular subject area.

Full-Time Child Care a Danger

On April 22nd at the International Conference on Infant Studies held in Washington D.C., University of Texas researchers Deborah Lowe Vandell and Mary Anne Corasaniti presented their findings on the harmful effects of full-time child care. In a study of middle-class children in Dallas they found that those who are in day care from an early age are more likely to be uncooperative and unpopular by the third grade. Full-time child care was also associated with poorer study skills, lower grades and diminished self-esteem. Vandell, a fulltime professor with two minor children expected different results from her study and hopes that it will not lead to a call for mothers to stay home. She need not worry - the degenerate media which is dominated by capitalists and feminists who want women to work will not allow such a thing to happen. But we appreciate Ms. Vandell's honesty as it so rare in academia today - we would have expected that she would have fudged her results for both personal and political benefit. Her study lends even greater weight to the notion that we must pay our men enough to support their families, and that mothers be encouraged to work only in cottage industries, i.e. work that can be done in the home, which work will become more available with the expansion of the computer revolution.

Jewish Arrogance

A group of Jewish war veterans has asked a federal judge to remove a 65-foot-high wooden cross that has stood on a hillside overlooking a U.S. Marine Corps base in Hawaii for more than 20 years. The cross was erected by the Marine Corps to memorialize those who died in Vietnam. We would love to see figures on what percentage of Jews served in that war, or any American war for that matter. As we have said before, when the Jews are on top, they always overplay their hand, which is why they never remain on top for long. As Nietzsche said, they are arrogant in victory, cringing in defeat.

especially for Whites. The number of Whites living in poverty rose by 55% compared to 31% for Blacks.

Is the growth in poverty caused by a lack of commitment on the part of the Reagan Administration? Hardly. We are spending more money to eliminate poverty today than we ever have before. In fact, the amount of money is staggering - more than $400 billion on social programs at the federal, state and local levels. If all of this money were simply given to people living below the poverty level, it would amount to more than $11,000 per poor person, or about $45,000 for a family of four.

How can the government spend so much money to eliminate poverty and end up with more of it? One reason is that we are paying people to be poor. If you want to discourage an activity you tax it; if you want to encourage an activity you subsidize it. In America today we tax non-poverty and subsidize poverty lavishly. Specifically, we subsidize divorce, unwed teenage pregnancy (mostly Black), abandonment of the elderly by their children and the wholesale dissolution of the family. Unfortunately, people are responding to these incentives.

The second reason that poverty is steadily increasing is that the welfare bureaucracy is designed from top to bottom to maximise the poverty count. In measuring poverty the federal government looks only at cash income and conveniently ignores non-cash forms of income. This means we can spend billions of dollars on non-cash welfare benefits without reducing the official poverty count one iota.

In 1983 a family of four with cash income of less than $10,178 was classified as poor. On the surface that figure would appear to be a very meager standard of living. However, this amount excludes the value of non-cash benefits such as food stamps, public housing and Medicaid.

The poverty bureaucracy has capitalized on this unusual way of measuring poverty by expanding non-cash benefits. Since 1965, means-tested non-cash benefits have increased by 5,238%, and during the same period means-tested cash benefits have barely changed at all in real terms.

The way we spend our welfare dollars makes the welfare system increasingly appealing to people living in near poverty without at the same time reducing the number of people counted as poor. It is for this reason that the more we spend eliminating poverty, the more poverty we have.

The paradox of the welfare system is that the non-cash benefits awarded to the poor eventually lead to money in the pockets of people who are not poor. Money spent on Medicaid, for example, goes to doctors, hospitals and nursing homes. Money spent on housing goes to landlords and contractors. The poor are mere conduits though which funds are channeled from taxpayers to other non-poor people.

Indeed, it is sobering to realize that almost all the transfer income in the United States ends up in the bank accounts of special interest groups. Anyway you look at it, radical reform of the U.S. welfare system is urgently needed. I suggest two changes for starters:

1)Welfare should be separated from Social Insurance. Under the current system the working poor (2/3 of the total poor) are paying taxes under the Social Security and Medicare programs to fund the retirement pensions of millionaires.

2) All welfare benefits should be means-tested. There is no legitimate need for welfare except to provide for needs that will otherwise go unmet. In order to attain this objective, there must be evidence that genuine need exists.

Sincerely,
Dan Miller

My Journey to White Nationalism

By Tom Panvini

The road that led me to recently join the National Democratic Front was long and painful, but it was a necessary evolution of self to the embodiment of the whole - the White nation. I was born in New York City in 1951 to a White middle-class family with traditional cultural values and morals. The neighborhood I grew up in as a child, East Elmhurst in Queens, was thoroughly integrated. In fact, such Blacks as Louis Armstrong, Johnny Mathis, and Malcolm X had lived there. Although I went to Catholic school, it too was integrated. So I did not see the Blacks as inferior, nor did I feel any hatred for them - they were just other faces in the crowd.

My first good friend in school was a Black boy named Donald. We did all the things best friends normally do - played, shared secrets and wondered about the future - until the day Donald invited me over his house to eat dinner. When I arrived his mother was waiting at the door with Donald at her side. She sat both of us down on the stoop, and then she explained that Donald's father did not allow Whites into his house, and that it would be best if Donald and I no longer played together.

When I returned home, I explained to my father what had happened. He was silent for a moment, then said to me, "Stick to your own kind son." "But why?" I asked. "Because blood is thicker than water," he replied. And then he turned away and said no more.

My Journey

SUBMISSION

In 1965 I started high school. It was the first time I attended a public school. I was placed in the academic curriculum where Jewish kids predominated. It was the beginning of the liberal revolution and the Jewish kids personified its ideals - ideals that were radically different from the traditional concepts I had always been taught. I found such ideas alien and distasteful, and when I said as much the Jewish kids would say, "Oh, you're just a hitter," which expression they commonly used against all White kids. But as time went on these ideas became more and more popular amongst the White kids as well. Along with the liberal ideology came the "tune-in, turn-on, drop-out" life-style.

By the late '60s I found myself part of what seemed to be a lost culture and lost identity. Young, weak and unable to stand against the rising tide of liberalism, I found myself submitting to the ominous presence that surrounded me - to its drugs, sex, and rock 'n roll mentality. It was what passed for morality and fulfillment at the time, and unfortunately still does for many today.

DISSIPATION AND REAWAKENING

As the '60s passed into the '70s all traditional beliefs were being mocked and criticized. Family and marriage gave way to sexual freedom. Sexual morality gave way to homosexuality and perversity. Virtue gave way to drug addiction and vice, order to rebellion and anarchy. As the Blacks put it, good is "Bad!" "White" had become a dirty word, as if all White men had been born with some kind of secular original sin. These were the most turbulent and confusing of times as I meandered aimlessly through life, unsure whether or not I had the right to be.

Came the '80s like a slow awakening - a return to basics, a re-identification of self as part of a whole with a share in its great purpose. That purpose being the reaffirmation of the White Race - the race that is culture. Culture is "training or discipline by which man's moral and intellectual nature is elevated." Civilization! And who has better defined civilization than the White Race? Certainly not a people who have wandered throughout history being exiled from other nations, taking with them bits and pieces of the culture of others. And, most certainly not a people who have yet to emerge from the jungle and its barbaric way of life.

The White man not only has the right to be, he has the responsibility as the highest form of life to be. Where would civilization be without the White Race? Look how things have declined in just the 40 years since we began to take a submissive role in the history of the world.

WHITE NATIONALISM THE ANSWER

Racial supremacy, though biological fact it may be, is not the answer politically. Only complete separation can ensure racial purity. For the benefit of our own race, we must resist the temptation to exploit other peoples, and we must give each the power of self-determination.

We have tried the left/liberal approach, and we have tried the right/conservative approach and both have failed miserably to stem the tide of degeneration. The "peace & love" generation has only succeeded in creating more conflict and hate by mixing the races against their will. Now the conservatives want to bring ever more of the world's non-White poor to our shores to feed their money machines with cheap labor - while millionss of our own go unemployed. It is time for racial nationalism. The races as separate nations can maintain their identities, cultures and self-respect, but mixed together they will be forever competing for dominance.

Every man must have an identity - we must feel that we are one thing and not another. We cannot live long in confusion. Let us learn to be what we are and to accept what nature has given, and maybe one day we will truly know peace and love - it can come only when we understand that "blood is thicker than water." TP
